IRAN (Ancient Arrowhead) 11-80080C
As flint tools and weapons, metal arrowheads were used as media of exchange by various primitive tribes.

EGYPT (Predistoric Flint) 11-80080C
10,000 B.C. Flint has been used in trade since the dawn of civilization. Tribes who lived near deposits of flint learned to shape this flint into tools and weapons and then used them for trading with tribes who did not have flint.

UNITED STATES (Gold Nuggets) 11-80080C
Colonial Period. Due to scarcity of coin in Colonial times, gold nuggets were substituted for money, chief among them being nails and bullets. One bullet of this size had a value of approximately 1/4 Cent.

NEW BRITAIN (Stone Disc Money)
These pieces were holed so that they might be strung on cords and worn around the neck to facilitate carrying.

FULU PENANG (Stone Disc Money)
Stone, Oval Shape, 20x24mm. This piece from Fulu Penang (Prince of Wales Island) in the South Pacific has its value cut in a depression.

UNITED STATES (Gold Nugget) 11-80080C
Mid-19th Century, California. Gold was used in the western American states in the late 1840's and 1850's as a medium of exchange due to its ready availability. Such gold, either in dust or nugget form, passed by weight until it was turned in to the mint to be made into coin.

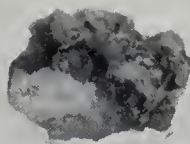

YAP ISLAND (Limestone money). Yap Island in the western Carolines in the South Pacific is noted for its large millstone disks, the larger ones of which are holed. These pieces along with the one exhibited here were used as a regular medium of exchange.

MALDIVES ISLANDS (Cowry Shells)
The Maldivian Islands in the Indian Ocean were one of the many places where shells were used as a form of money. Of all shells used in this way, the Cowry shell was the most popular.

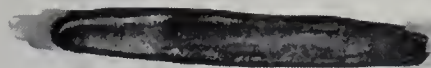

AFRICA (Shell Money) Shells probably constitute the oldest medium of exchange. The value of each shell depended upon its scarcity, color, and time required to break, chip, polish, drill and string them.

Piece of Gold-Bearing Quartz.

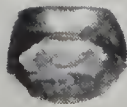

SIAM (Tiger Tongue Money) Base Silver. Cast bar of base silver used in the Laos States of northern Siam and having a raised border like a tiger's tongue.

SIAM (Boat Money) Brass. Cast bar of brass called boat money after its shape. Used in the Laos States of Siam. Also called canoe money.

SIAM (Bullet Money) Bangkok Brass Alloy. These pieces were first used to weigh opium, but later merchants found them useful to weigh money. The weights of these could be adjusted by removing sections of the rim. (6 pieces)
